Course Introduction

Social marketing for behavioral change is a powerful approach that applies marketing strategies to influence positive social behaviors and drive sustainable impact. In today's fast-paced and digitally connected world, organizations, governments, and NGOs require evidence-based strategies to address pressing social issues such as health promotion, environmental sustainability, public safety, and community engagement. Social Marketing for Behavioral Change Training Course equips participants with modern frameworks, actionable tools, and hands-on techniques to design, implement, and evaluate effective campaigns that go beyond awareness creation to drive measurable behavior change.

Through this course, participants will explore trending social marketing practices, digital engagement strategies, data-driven behavioral insights, and storytelling methods that shape public perception and influence decision-making. They will also learn how to integrate policy advocacy, stakeholder collaboration, and evaluation tools into their campaigns, ensuring scalability and sustainability. By combining theory with practical case studies, the program provides a comprehensive understanding of how to transform innovative ideas into impactful social change.
